

WATT IS MADE THE RECEIVER

Old Time Circus Man Is Appointed to Take Charge of Wild West Show.

WILL SELL CIRCUS

Performers Are Leaving the City with All Speed—Cossacks and Indians Remain.

D. W. Watt's Wild West show is at the Spring Brook circus grounds. At noon today Mr. Watt took possession of the Luella-Foran-Fish tents, wagons, horses, and menagerie. He was appointed receiver by Judge Dunwiddle, to take charge of the property and conduct the sale of the possessions of the bankrupt company, which was attached for $23,000, the value of the investments of the owners.

Stock to Be Sold.
All of the horses will be turned out to pasture. The wild animals will be so caged that they can be cared for with as little trouble and expense as possible. The wagons and other stock will be housed in some convenient place. In the meantime a sale will be advertised, which will occur in from ten to twenty days, when the show will be disposed of either in whole or to the best possible advantage of the creditors.

People Leaving Town.
For some days to come Indians, Cossacks, and cowboys will roam the streets, although they are leaving as rapidly as possible. There is probably not a saloon keeper in town who has not been asked for a loan upon watch or some other piece of personal property. As a whole the show people were as nearly broke when the circus was attached as it is possible to be. For greater or less lengths of time they have not been paid, and none had foreseen the sudden termination of their engagements.

Went to Chicago.
Many left for Chicago this morning, having raised the price of the tickets. There they felt sure of finding other positions. The Clipper, Billboard, and other theatrical and show journals, which give lists of open engagements and routes were read with avidity. The wires were kept hot with messages seeking positions. A number of the cowboys set their eyes toward Omaha, Kansas City, and other western points where they can resume the occupation to which they were trained.

Indians Are Fortunate.
The Indians were envied by all. When they left their South Dakota reservation it was under agreement between the government and the show people that at the close of the season they should be returned to the reservation. It may be a couple days before their transportation arrives to take them back to their homes, and they express little discontent with their lot. Their tobacco tastes as it did Saturday.

Cossacks Provided For.
The Cossacks and other Asiatics are free from the uncertainty as to the future which troubles others of the performers. They are all under the management of Georgian, who will hold them here until he hears of a new engagement. His attraction can easily secure dates for carnival, street fair, or circus work. They in their big tent and the Indians in their wigwams feel the blow of these financial troubles far less than do the others who still remain at the Spring Brook grounds.

Bicyclists Remember Benefactor.
J. K. Starley, the inventor of the safety bicycle, is to be immortalized by a memorial in England, for which $2,500 has already been subscribed. The subscriptions are coming in very liberally at present.

Growth of German People.
In 1870 the German people barely exceeded 40,000,000; in 1885 they had risen to nearly 47,000,000, and in 1900 the census return gave 56,345,014.

DEATH AND INJURY ON THE RAILROADS

One Passenger Is Killed in Vestibule of Sleeper, While Companion Is Unhurt.

St. Paul, Minn., July 27.—Four men were killed and twenty-five to thirty persons were injured in a head-end collision on the Chicago Great Western road, near Hastings, this state.

The dead: Engineer Charles Merkert, Fireman H. Cogger, Engineer H. Helman, Fred Horton, Dodge Center, Minn., passenger.

Fred Horton, the passenger who was killed, was said to have been standing in the vestibule of the front sleeper talking to a friend, and was instantly killed, while his friend escaped injury. The two trains were the Twin City limited and a fast freight. The limited was running as a first section from Oelwein, Iowa, to Minneapolis. The second section consisted of an excursion train running from Des Moines to Minneapolis and was three hours behind time.

The fast freight, south-bound, received an order at Dodge Center reading that the second section of the passenger train was three hours late, and the crew evidently misread the order and attempted to make Viasaty siding, between Dodge Center and Hastings, Minn., thinking it was the limited that was late.

Fireman Is Killed.

Moline, Ill., July 27.—While going at a reduced speed the westbound freight train on the Rock Island road dropped a truck from off a flat car on the principal business street in this city, which caused the wreck of several cars in the train and wrecking the flagman's tower. An instant later a Burlington extra freight eastbound crashed into the ruins. The body of Hurley, the flagman, was found pinned beneath the wreckage of the tower and a car of lumber scattered broadcast.

Three Are Killed.

East St. Louis, Ill., July 27.—An accommodation train on the Vandalia road en route to St. Louis ran into a well-filled electric car on the East St. Louis & Suburban street railway near Lansdowne, three miles north of here, killing three persons and injuring a score.

The dead: Engineer John Roy, Vandalia; J. J. Lenhardt, David H. Beatlie.

Wreck on the Big Four.

Wellington, Ohio, July 27.—While rounding a sharp curve several miles south of here at a speed of sixty miles an hour, the flyer on the Big Four road crashed into the rear end of a freight train which was just pulling into a siding. Three persons were injured.

Drains Large Area.

That low lying territory of the Mississippi should a times be overflowed is not surprising if one considers that the "Father of Waters" drains supplies from twenty-eight States, draining one-third of the area of the United States.

(Special By Scripps-McLae.)
Rome, July 27.—High Requiem mass for the late pope was celebrated this morning in the church of St. John Laternan, the oldest church in Rome. Cardinal Catelli was the celebrant. Those present were members of the clerical diplomatic notables.

Another Combination.
It is now rumored about Rome that Cardinal Vanutelli will be the choice of the French and American interests and may possibly be elected pope in case of any division on the part of the other cardinals.

RELIANCE IS BOAT PICKED

Final Series of Races Are Merely a Matter of Form at Present.

WANT VANUTELLI

New Boat Has Proved Its Speed in Several Contests Recently Held.

(Special By Scripps-McLae.)
Newport, July 27.—First race of the trial series to select the cup defender was held today with the Reliance, Constitution and Columbia candidates. Three races will be sailed and the choice made from the best boat.

Reliance Surely.
Unless had luck overtakes the Reliance it will be the cup defender. The weather today was ideal for the race; a stiff northeast breeze is blowing. The Reliance is expected to lead from start to finish by old sailors.

Reliance Leads.
The course is fifteen miles to the leeward and return. All the boats got away at eleven-thirty with the Reliance leading and steadily gaining in the first five miles. Great interest is being shown in the result of these races.

POKER POKES.

Big and cold feet are admirable in Polderdom; but small hands are not admired.

It is an anomalous and painful truth that a straight hand may be the result of a crooked deal.

In a game of draw, do not let the barkeeper do much drawing, for a full hand is more dangerous than a full hand.

As an abnormal vacuum, poker takes the pot, because it is so full of empty hands, empty pockets and empty homes.

Consideration doesn't count for as much as a white chip in poker, where necessarily everything must be carried with a high hand.

Poker is not the only American game in which it is a heap easier to play the other fellow's hand than your own, but it's the commonest.

After winning on a bluff, don't fail to show your hand with a horse laugh. It is such a kind, neat, and safe way of trying to make the loser feel like a fool.

HEROIC CONDUCTOR SAVES PASSENGERS

Signals Onrushing Train in Time to Prevent Excursionists Being Ground to Pieces.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 27.—Conductor S. A. Gunn of the St. Paul road averted what might have been a wreck costing hundreds of lives. An excursion train of fifteen cars containing nearly 1,500 people was returning from Elkhart lake on the St. Paul road. At North avenue in this city the train stopped and 600 people alighted in the darkness, where there are no lights and no station. The Wisconsin Central's Stevens Point train, bound out, which uses the St. Paul track in the city, came rushing along at a high rate of speed.

Several hundred people were on the track in front of the oncoming train. Conductor Gunn struggled through the crowd, wildly waving his lantern. Engineer Terry turned loose his whistle and the Wisconsin Central engineer managed to stop his train just at the edge of the crowd.

The disaster was so imminent that Gunn nearly fainted when he reached his train again and doctors had to be summoned to care for women in the crowd who were so badly frightened that they lost consciousness.

WANTS GENERAL CLAY'S GOLD

Divorced Child Wife Is Ready to Fight to Enforce Will.

Lexington, Ky., July 27.—Dora Clay Brock, former child wife of General Cassius M. Clay and the largest beneficiary of his will, just offered for probate in Madison county, has gone to Valley View to consult her friends regarding the contest it is reported the heirs will make on the will, which is dated three years ago, at which time it is claimed the general was not in his right mind. It is hinted by friends of the young woman that she may claim that her 5-year-old boy is General Clay's child. She was married to General Clay in 1894 and he gave her a divorce in 1898. She then married Riley Brock, who was killed by a train a few weeks ago at Longview, Ill. General Clay had given her a home in Woodford county, where she was living when she married Brock.

ALTON, ILL., HAS FATAL BLAZE

Girl Dies and Other Persons Are Hurt When Several Places Are Burned.

Alton, Ill., July 27.—Fire believed to have been started by an incendiary destroyed the Alton steam laundry, a row of flats, a barber shop and part of a lumber yard and resulted in the death of one person and injuries to six others. The dead: Miss Ruth Meyers, burned to death. The injured: Mrs. Fred Meyers, Adam Wolfe, Jr., William Meisler, William Nicholson, Louis Steiner, George Aloin. All the injured were badly burned but Aloin, who was hurt in jumping. The total loss on property is $35,000. This was the third time fire had started in the neighborhood within a month.

Increase of City Tenements.

From Jan. 1 to May 1, 1903, five times as many permits for the building of tenements were issued in the borough of Brooklyn as in the same period of the preceding year. The average cost meanwhile dropped from $15,000 to $10,000.

MILITIA WAS CALLED OUT

Seventh Regiment from Chicago Sent to Danville, Illinois, to Quell Riot.

JEERING SOLDIERS

Rumors of Further Trouble Are Heard, and the Streets Are Carefully Patrolled.

(Special By Scripps-McLae.)

Danville, Ill., July 27.—With the city patrolled by the militia quiet has been restored here after the race war of Saturday night, in which two persons were killed and twenty-two wounded. Bayonets are in evidence on all sides, and it is hoped that further rioting can be prevented.

However, there still is grave danger, for mutterings are heard among the rougher elements and threats of vengeance by friends and relatives of the victims foreshadow further outbreaks.

There are rumors of a mob to be formed at Westville, five miles from here, by miners, comrades of Adam Merry, who was fatally shot during the attack on the jail. The stories do not say when the attack is intended, but the soldiers have been provided with ball cartridges and are ready for combat.

The militiamen here consist of companies A, B, H, and I, Seventh regiment of Chicago. Much feeling has been shown against the soldiers, and difficulty was experienced in procuring food for them.

Threaten the Sheriff.
Threats against the sheriff continue, but it is not believed the local mob can be gathered together again.

The sheriff and military officers have urged all citizens to remain off the streets. All saloons have been ordered closed indefinitely.

Metcalf, the negro killed and burned Saturday night, had lived at Evansville for the last two years and was a recent refugee from that city, where he participated in the riots of a few weeks ago.

As the result of a conference last night between Judge Thompson, Sheriff Thompson, Sheriff Whitlock, and State's Attorney Keesler, it is likely that the "Sore finger brigade," who got the volleys of buckshot poured down the length of the rail used as a battering ram by the sheriff's force will be summoned and asked to show cause why they should not be held to the grand jury as members of the lynching mob.

Mayor Slow to Act.

Praise is showered on the sheriff who adopted the idea of aiming the gun down the sidetrack rail so as to disable as many hands as possible, without taking life.

Mayor Beard, who has made no move to investigate the lynching, is coming in for severe criticism for his plan that he was unable to recognize the men in the mob who faced him on the city building steps. It is charged that if nothing comes of the plan to prosecute the lynchers, political considerations will be to blame.

Sermons on the disgrace to the city were preached in nearly all the churches. The Rev. H. C. Gibbs of the First Methodist church denounced Mayor Beard.

Jeer the Soldiers.

Two thousand persons walked the streets Sunday behind the picket lines visiting the scenes of the various events in the mob tragedy. From the ranks of excited citizens came jeers for the troops, cries for the eviction of the negroes from Danville and threats of vengeance on Sheriff Hardy Whitlock, who, with his handful of deputies, prevented the lynchers from wreaking fury on five other black prisoners in the county jail.

The situation is considered as extremely grave by the authorities. It develops that the outbreak Saturday night was the culmination of a feud between the whites and blacks, the fires of which have been fed by successive outbreaks of bloodshed and violence. The relations between the races became critical with the advent two weeks ago of a number of negroes from Evansville. A week ago William Riley, an old man, was knocked off his porch and killed by a negro, "Diamond Joe" Jones. On Friday at Alvan, a neighboring village, James Wilson, a negro, is alleged to have attempted an assault on Mrs. Carrie Burgess in her own kitchen. Both blacks were in the county jail when the mob formed.

Flancee Arouses Ire.

In view of the feeling aroused by these incidents and the fact that the negro prisoners still are in the jail, it is likely that the state troops will be kept here for several days.

The already bitter hatred for the negroes was further deepened by the pathetic romance woven into a tragedy which young Gatterman's murder revealed. When the Chicago train arrived Sunday afternoon a

ABLE SERMON AT CHRIST CHURCH

PREACHED BY REV. EVANS, SUNDAY MORNING.

ELOQUENT AND SCHOLARLY

Treats of Life as Taken Up by the Epistle to the Romans.

"For none of us liveth to himself, and noma dieth to himself."—Romans 14, verse 7.

Human life is a gift and to live is a privilege. Each life is a part of a vast kingdom from which it can not detach itself. The welfare of the whole depends upon the individual. His thoughts and his emotions either help or hinder the progress of his fellowman. "None of us liveth to himself."

The influence of each life is measured by the motives and the principles which are its guiding power. The difference between the life of Alexander Hamilton and the life of Aaron Burr is due to the difference in their respective creeds. This motive power causes a Washington to be held in lasting remembrance, and it buries a Bonaparte in obliquity and oblivion. Human progress is the result of the delight of mind and heart for great aims and ends. There is a noble purpose underlying all high achievement.

A lofty mind should not attach itself to a small sentiment. A great voice should not sing trifling music. A noble soul should not carry a narrow religion. Each mind and heart should march along the paths which lead to a greater happiness, and to a divine and a wiser humanity, for "none of us liveth to himself."

In these words are embodied the deepest difficulties and the richest privileges of human life. They include that mysterious relation between the sacred region that is within each human soul and that vast region that is without the man, and which surrounds him like the atmosphere. Man lives a life free and independent. It is an absolute separate existence as though he were alone—the only human being in the universe. At the same time there beats upon that life an ocean of existence. It is placed in the midst of the sea of life. Both of these regions are claiming man's allegiance. Both of them are demanding his duty and his activity. The world within the man calls him to cultivate himself; to develop the powers which have been entrusted to him. It calls him to self-culture. Every man possesses a special talent, and a peculiar character all his own. And the development of that character demand a training different from the education and the discipline of any other life in any age. Whatever may be the claims and the clamors of that tumultuous world without the man, he must not neglect nor ignore that duty of self-discipline and self-culture. This something which we call "human nature" has been entrusted to our care and we are in duty bound to seek its highest development. No other obligation must conflict with that. For man, although he tabernacles for a time, in a material form, and lives a few days, on the confines of the world of matter, is as an individual, a spiritual and imperishable being. In the depth of his personality man is a soul without form or color. It is immaterial.

The scalpel of the anatomist has failed to touch it. The psychologist with his keen observation and deep research can not detect its inaccessible recesses. The light of philosophy has failed to penetrate the mysterious chambers of the soul. To this living soul every nerve responds. Every organ and every faculty obey it. It is neither intellect nor will, nor memory. These are only windows through which the light shines. To this depth of life within him; to this unit of power, which constitutes personality, man owes a duty of cultivation and self-culture.

All the great work of the world deals with the hidden region we call "soul." The faces of the "Madonna" and the "Christ" are the efforts of human genius and skill to portray the soul of man. The soul itself being invisible the artist endeavors to delineate the mystic depth of life in eye, and forehead, and mouth and form. But however gifted the artist he can not bridge the gulf that yawns between the physical and the spiritual. There is limitation to his paint and his canvas. Modesty and purity, gentleness and heroism are forever retreating before brush or chisel.

The same is true of music. It issues from the "inner life" and deals with that "inner life." It is deeper, far deeper, than mere harmony of sounds. It is an experience of soul. A sonata or a symphony brings back to memory holy friendships and the sweet faces of the dead. It carries the soul upward to a world of forgiveness and purity and affection. It has issued from a human soul and is an imperfect picture of the soul.

Man sets out on his career poor in mental and spiritual property, and he must begin at once the work of acquisition. Language, history, science and religion all must be acquired. Each day must add to his estate some new knowledge or wisdom or power. We are living on the banks of a "pure river of water of life," from which we can take many a cupful daily forever and ever. The intellect of man is the grandest servant of inner life. It gathers the material that feeds the sacred flame. The ancient poet tells us: "My heart was not within me, while I was nursing the fire burned." While the facts of life passed in grand review before his intellect the soul within him was augmented in the power of motion, joy, charity, worship, love, eloquence. The truths of our planet are food that nourishes the emotions and the impulses of man's divine higher life. Strange being who can turn truth into soul.

The apostle tells us that "none of us liveth to himself." The meaning of all our culture, and learning and education lies partly in the fact that man is a toiler in the vast field of human welfare. Man is more than a mere individual existence. He is a part of an age. He does not live unto himself. His culture and his goodness are forces which create a public condition. God offers these two great fields of duty to every man. He must develop his own essential life, and make it shine with brightness and splendor in the firmament of existence, and then he must pour his thought and love into the life of the race. When manhood or womanhood has reached a refined sensibility of heart, that emotion must melt away and become a part of mankind. Taste, sentiment, goodness, love of truth and beauty, admiration of justice and righteousness—must flow, like a mighty river, to that region that lies outside of self. "None of us liveth to himself." The present is a part of all time, past and future. We are influenced of the knowledge, the sculpture, the painting, the music and the morals of the past. And the present will transmit to the future a picture of itself. All modern progress, and morals and culture pass into laws and customs and actions that will create the climate of the coming age. Civilization is the result of man's mental and moral activity among the highest aims of society and among the greatest causes for good. And all laws, physical, mental, moral and industrial play an essential part in the advancement and the pilgrimage of the human family. This human welfare is a river made up of the confluence of many streams. No tributary liveth to itself. It pours the momentum that it has gathered from the hill or tableland into the river that flows onward toward the sea. The two greatest forces of civilization are religion and intellectual power. An age is called, sometimes with derision, a "commercial" or an "industrial age." But such an epithet only reveals the greatness of the era in which we live. A great age must be industrial and commercial. Industry is a symbol of the uprising of man's mental life. An ignorant slave can pick the cotton or drive the ox-cart, but a flying train or a sailing ship requires a trained hand and a disciplined brain. The machinery of our industrial world demands skilled labor. A barbarous state may possess a few favored children, but these rare, great minds do not compose a civilization. Civilization is the volume of the activity of all. "None of us liveth to himself." No one can live well his own private life without helping the public to the glow of soul called manhood and womanhood. That seems to be God's plan in the realm of humanity. God created each star and placed it in the infinite blue of heaven to pour its silvery beams to the system to which it belongs. God fashioned man in his own image, and placed him in a system called humanity, so that the divine light in his forehead should lighten the dark recesses of other human lives and hearts; turn dens into palaces and darkness into light. The intellectual power of the individual is embalm in the brain of humanity and the love and the kindness and the pure religion of each human heart find lodgement in the bosom of mankind. As heat melts the ice and snow of winter, and always will as long as heat and ice and snow endure, so truth spoken and lived will crush all error, and holiness of life will blot out all sin and vice. "None of us liveth to himself." Man and humanity are bound absolutely together, like the solar system. There is no conflict among the planets. They all revolve in harmony around the sun, from west to east. Soul should not conflict with soul in the firmament of civilization. Hand should clasp hand, and heart should beat in unison with heart for our light is a borrowed and reflected light that shineth from the Father's face. "None of us liveth to himself."

We come to the life of our Lord and Master, Jesus Christ. Here we find the divinest illustration of our truth, and the truest pattern of man's obligation to that self within him and to that multiform existence that surrounds him. His great words are: "For their sakes I sanctify myself." During those thirty years in quiet Nazareth the Master was developing the life which God had given Him to live in the world. Neither haste nor weakness; neither cowardice nor distrust can induce Him from that duty He knows is due to His own life. He struggled with this problem in the wilderness until He discovered the sacredness, the richness and the divineness of His life and His union in the world. He entered into the deep mysteries of His Father; and, according to the Father's will he developed His divine manhood to its completeness and its fullest attainment so that He was prepared and ready to save a world. From the beginning of his public career his work was perfect. He never changed nor modified a single word once spoken. He never sighed regrets over a single deed once done. Matchless life! He journeyed. He taught. He persuaded. He wept. He cured. He blessed. He sympathized. He suffered and He died in order to lift the children of men back to the bosom of God the Father.

"None of us liveth to himself," and strange world "no man dieth to himself." There is a Greek legend that a beautiful Laconian youth, beloved of Apollo, was accidentally killed by that god with a discus; and that from his blood sprang the flower called the hyacinth. That stands as an illustration. The influence of a human friend, whom we have long known and deeply loved, causes flowers to grow and blossom in the heart long after the kindly face has been withdrawn from our presence. The death of Arthur Hallam melted Tennyson into tears and he sang "O dear friend, far off my lost desire So far, so near, in woe and weal; O, loved the most, when most I feel There is a lower and a higher."

"Known and unknown, human divine, Sweet human hand and lip and eye Dear heavenly friend that canst not die. Mine, mine, for ever, ever mine, "Strange friend, past, present and to be; Love deeper, darker understood, Behold I dream a dream of good, And mingle all the world with thee."

"My love involves the love before; My love is vaster passion now; Tho' mixed with God and nature thou, "I seem to love thee more and more."

"No man dieth to himself." All of us who are here today enjoying life and happiness in the house of God, have friends or relatives who have already gone. One by one these loved ones have passed out of our sight, going in the full strength of manhood and womanhood or in the radiant power of youth, old age, or childhood's innocent hour. They have all journeyed along that broad highway so full of human foot-prints, and their going hence lift up our hearts in silent meditation to the unknown world. Their absence heighten the flight of reflection as we kneel before the altar erected to the name of God. This serious contemplation does not slacken the power of human joy and peace. It is with a cloud of sadness cast over human homes and hearts, but a dignified and a sober happiness issuing from the friendships on the plains of heaven. "No man dieth to himself."

The sun is more gorgeous at sunset than at noon. Silent is the nightgale until the night casts its shadows over field and forest. In order to produce a rich flood of melody and harmony from a full harp unseen hands must smite the heart-strings. "No man dieth to himself." We can not find on the page of history an illustration of this truth, equal to the pageantry of the civil war. We of the younger age can picture it in imagination only. Personal happiness was pushed aside. Farewell was spoken to father, mother, sister, wife and children. Tears moistened the burning cheek. Loved scenes are left behind. On moved the soldier to the field of war. What thunder of cannon! What falling on the field! What longing prayers and goodbyes as the soldier fell into his final sleep! What is the explanation? That a nation might put on more moral strength and power, and be arrayed in the stainless garments of liberty and equality among men. The soul of the patriot was given to the soul of his country. He died that from his blood should spring up and blossom the flowers of a great age. "No man dieth to himself."

SUNDAY SERVICE AT THE Y. M. C. A.

BOYS TELL OF PHANTOM LAKE VISIT.

ARE MANY INTERESTING TALKS

The Afternoon Was Most Profitably Spent by the Boys and Their Friends.

The meeting for men at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday was of special interest to every one. Anthony Wilkinson, engineer on the C. M. & St. P. road, had charge of the meeting. The opening exercises consisted of a short song service. Mr. Wilkinson then presented his topic, "Determination." Taking for a basis the blind man beseeching Jesus to restore his sight by his persistent determination, his desires were realized; special point, "a good desire and true determination" always brings success. Mr. Wilkinson gave several strong and practical illustrations of determined men and in contrast showed that the final results of all determination would be success. If the purpose was good the success would be stronger character, larger experience and a true blessing to humanity. If the purpose was light and frivolous the success would be weakness of character, a drifting in the wrong direction and failure in the end.

At the close of Mr. Wilkinson's talk he gave time for the boys who had attended the state conference of junior work at Phantom Lake to present to the men a synopsis of that great conference in the development of the world wide work for boys.

Elmer Dreyer spoke first and gave the object and purpose of the conference. He said we must have the aim, which comes under three divisions—1st, a vision; 2nd, the ability to arrive; 3rd, a worthy purpose. The vision refers to view of the whole field and not a part only. The ability to arrive is the accomplishment of things for definite results and a worthy purpose is choosing the right.

Wallace Mills gave some special points on the social work, methods and plans; three kinds were emphasized—the home social, the group social and the mass social. The home social was where some lady would invite a certain group of the boys to her home and entertain them for the evening. The group social was when the boys' committee would arrange for certain committees to have a social at the rooms and plan a special program themselves. The mass social was the annual banquet where all boys come together and had the best of everything provided and summed up the year's work.

son on physical work under the head of "Character in Athletics." He said it was not muscle only, but perseverance, constancy, pluck, sand, a good head, moral qualities, obedience, self-sacrifice, moral self-control, honesty, and a practical Christian life.

Roy Crissey told of boys' meetings, the kind of topics and purpose of the meetings. The topics should be such that all boys could take part. Conference meetings, object talks, stereopticon talks, and the purpose should be to cultivate a genuine testimony, natural, practical, to make boys better Christians; to make boys who are not Christians Christian; to train boys in Christian service; to develop a relish for helping others to help boys think for themselves.

Ellsworth Strang spoke on the Bible study session and emphasized the kinds of Bible classes and how they could be organized, group Bible classes, gymnasium Bible classes, bicycle Bible classes, woods Bible classes.

Arthur Fatales then spoke of the special session on Sunday at the lake, when Mr. Robinson, the international boys' secretary, gave a strong lesson of the value boys were in the laying of the foundation of Christian character. Dr. Richards also spoke of the general interest of the camp and the far reaching value of such gatherings as the influence goes out among boys through boys.

Mr. Wilkinson then expressed his appreciation and said he was not aware the boys would so nicely fit into his subject "Determination," but it was only emphasizing our thought to hear these boys of 12 to 14 years speak so intelligently and earnestly on such strong subjects.

The meeting was full of interest and closed with singing by the male quartette. The boys will enter upon their work and carry out some of the methods secured of the conference.

INDIAN WANTS TO KILL WHITE MAN

Wild West Savage Thought a Squaw Had Been Insulted by Jerry Sullivan.

Although attachment papers were served by Sheriff Appleby upon the Forepaugh-Fish show at the close of the afternoon's performance, the evening performance was given as though nothing had occurred. At both the afternoon and evening appearances of the Wild West good audiences were present, and the features were sufficiently interesting, although long drawn out, much after the fashion of the parade.

A buck Indian created a slight diversion in the afternoon by attempting to wreak vengeance upon Jerry Sullivan. Sullivan, the Indian said, had insulted one of the squaws.

A fortune teller attempted to hold up a farmer named Johnson for eight dollars, a price which she set as fair compensation for the fortune which she had told. Johnson considered one dollar sufficient, and Chief Hogan was called in as a board of arbitration.

Selee's Baseball Success

The Ex-Boston Manager, Now With Chicago Nationals, Ranks With Hanlon and Anson as a Producer of Winning Teams.

Manager Frank Selee, for whom thousands of Chicago's fans are pulling in the hope that he can guide the National league club into possession of a championship, which has not visited Chicago since 1836, is no novice in winning pennants. He has brought out seven championship teams, five of which have been figuring in major league company.

Selee, Hanlon and Anson form a class of their own in National league history. Each has captured five pennants, and if the quiet but hard work-

FRANK SELEE OF THE CHICAGO NATIONALS. Ing mentor of President Hart's Cubs makes a winner this season he will have established a new record in the oldest of America's two big leagues.

Selee's position even now compares favorably with that of his only two National league rivals and in major league baseball is surpassed only by that of Charles Comiskey, now of the Chicago White Sox, who have won six big league pennants—four in the American association and two in the American league—and two world's championships. Anson's five championships were won in the eighties.

Since the season of 1901 Hanlon, Selee and Fred Clarke have had a monopoly of National league buntings, Hanlon and Selee each gaining five, while Clarke has won the last two. Both Hanlon and Clarke in the gaining of their honors have been aided by consolidation, Hanlon by the combining of the Baltimore and Brooklyn clubs and Clarke by the consolidation of the Louisville and Pittsburgh teams. Selee's five, however, were all won at Boston, whereat there was formerly but one club, the Nationals, and he used none but the players of his own selection and development on the one team.

Unlike all other managers who have been as successful as he, Selee was never famous as a player. He played some baseball as an amateur, but never was a player in league company.

His first connection with professional baseball was in 1884 at Waltham, Mass., in the Massachusetts league, at a time when Jimmy Ryan was in Holyoke in the same organization. During the same year this club, with Selee, was transferred to Lawrence, Mass., and the league finally disbanded because it failed to pay, but Selee finished the season at Lawrence, keeping the team as an independent organization.

PITCHER CHARLES NICHOLS, A PROTEGE OF SELEE.

During the seasons of 1885 and 1886 Selee was with the club at Haverhill, Mass., in the Massachusetts league, Selee acting as manager of the team, of which Mr. Moody, the present secretary of the navy, was president.

The summer of 1887 found Selee at Oshkosh, Wis., where he won his first pennant. It is a peculiar coincidence that this year Selee won the championship of the then Western league by a margin of but one or two games in a light finish with the Milwaukee club, of which James A. Hart, now of the Chicago Nationals, was president.

The next year there was no club at Oshkosh, and Selee went to Omaha, his team finishing fifth in the Western league race, but in 1889, still in the same league, Selee led Omaha to a championship, and thereby gained his second minor league pennant by a wide margin. Selee's work had already won recognition in the big league, and during that year he acted as agent of the Boston club of the National league in signing players for the Hub.

The following year, 1890, Selee entered the ranks of major league managers, becoming manager of the Boston team. Again he crossed the baseball path of James A. Hart, succeeding the present Chicago National league president as manager at Boston. Hart's Boston team had finished second in 1888, and in 1890 Selee landed his new charges in fifth place.

Among the players whom Selee had on his team, however, were Lowe, until recently captain of the Chicago Nationals; Herman Long, Kiki Nichols, who is still with the Boston Nationals, and others, all recruited from the Western league, and in 1891 began Selee's long list of championships, the Boston club winning the pennant in the National league. Long and Nichols owe most of their success to the interest showed in them by Selee.

In 1892 came another pennant under the "two series plan," Boston winning the first series, Cleveland the second and Boston finally winning the play off and with it a second National league pennant.

Then in 1893 Selee made it three straight, Boston winning again, and Selee had tied Anson's three year record of 1891, 1892 and 1893.

Ned Hanlon and Baltimore then sprang into prominence, and that combination won three successive pennants in 1894, 1895 and 1896, Boston finishing third, sixth and fourth in the twelve club league.

Selee was not to be denied, however, and he soon gave Hanlon a dose of his own medicine. Boston won the National league championship in both 1897 and 1898, each year beating Baltimore, which finished second.

The consolidation of the Baltimore and Brooklyn clubs enabled Hanlon to tie Selee, for in the years 1899 and 1900 Hanlon landed the flag, giving himself a total of five championships, the same as Selee and Anson. In 1899 Selee was second with Boston and in 1900 third.

With the rules of the American league upon the National's stars in 1901 Fred Clarke and Pittsburgh stepped in, winning the championship, and Selee had to content himself with fifth place for Boston.

Last year Selee was induced to go to Chicago by President Hart, and with a weak team the former Boston man landed the club fifth.

This year he made a strong start, and the critics are now about a unit in counting the race for the flag as being between Chicago, Pittsburgh and New York. "May the best club win, and may the best club be headed by Selee," is now the slogan of the Windy City fans, although they now realize that the Pittsburgh team has a commanding lead and looks to be practically certain of carrying away its third consecutive pennant.

Fred Clarke, the manager and captain of the Pittsburgh team, champions of the National league, has had more fights than any ball player in the game. Recently he indulged in disputes with Bowerman, catcher of the New Yorks. Some of his fights have been with "Cupid" Childs, the noted second baseman of the old Cleveland; Fred Tenney of the Boston Nationals; Jesse Tannehill, then a pitcher for Pittsburgh, and Jesse Burkett, formerly of the St. Louis Nationals. These fights are fresh in the memory of the fans. Besides these, he has had numerous other minor difficulties. Clarke is pugnacious in his make up, and this fact leads him into trouble.

BASEBALL BRIEFS.

Pitcher Mike O'Neill, St. Louis Nationals, is a fast fielder and also can hit. He will make a good outfielder after his pitching days are over.

It looks as though Ed Poole would be added to the Cincinnati regular staff of pitchers and that in future Harper and Phillips will be the pitching substitutes.

The highest priced player in baseball is said to be Patsy Donovan of the St. Louis Nationals, his salary for this year being $9,000, $1,000 of which came for signing his contract.

"My name is misspelled more than any other player's in the country," said Pitcher Philippe in New York the other day. "They persist in putting an 'i' on the end when it should be 'e'."

Johnny Kling is the mainspring around whom the Chicago Nationals work with automatic precision. It will be a sorry day for the Orphans should the hard hitting and perfect fielding back stop get hurt.

...Forty Years Ago...

Janesville Daily Gazette, Monday, July 27, 1863.—The failure of our forces to take Fort Wagner, on Moon's Island, near Charleston, is not regarded as a defeat of the purpose to take Charleston. In a siege, there may be several repulses, and at last a victory may crown the efforts of the besiegers.

It is gratifying to learn that the rebel bandit, John Morgan, has at last been secured. His journey was a long and rough one, as he must have traveled over 400 miles through the river counties of the states of Ohio and Indiana. The place where he was captured was within a few miles of the Pennsylvania line and not far from the Ohio river.

It is said that the letters captured in Jeff Davis' house near Jackson show that the conspiracy to overthrow the union had been in existence from before the election of Mr. Lincoln. Among them were letters from Presidents Buchanan and Pierce, which were quite obsequious towards the mighty Jeff.

The majority of the republican party have but one remedy for every popular discontent. That remedy is to shoot down the offenders. No matter whether eight millions of people in the south or eight thousand working men in New York, break the law, the sole remedy proposed is the same—kill the whole of them.—Milwaukee News.

Last year, in many districts around us, where the men volunteered for the war left a scarcity of out door assistance on the farms, women who are women turned out and assisted in gathering the crops. In many instances the women of a settlement would go in a body and harvest large fields of corn for some poor soldier's lone wife.

Gossip of Seasonable Modes

HERE is always something delightfully delicious about July fashions, as we see them at the resorts or on their way there. They represent the summer's finished product, and yet their newness has not worn off, and they are still blessed with the charm of freshness.

And how much detail is there in the frock of the hour! Take, for instance, the sleeve. A good frock is known by its sleeve. It is not easy to suit the long shoulder to every figure, but Parisians seem to have brought about a compromise which suits us all. Most sleeves are fairly simple about the elbow, tucked or gauged, and arranged with a flat shoulder. Then comes an apparent superfluity of stuff, generally chiffon or lace, finely knife-killed or tucked by hand, with encrustations of embroidery, finished with a dainty wristband of handwork or a falling cavalier frill.

It is interesting to note that in many of the garden-party and muslin frocks the sleeves end at the elbow, and this is a charming mode when the arm thus exposed is prettily rounded. Of course, out of doors long gloves or silk lace mittens are worn with these short sleeves. The latter are quaint and in keeping with the pompadour period, the Marie Antoinette fashions and dainty muslins, flowered chiffons and chene silks.

Many people are asking what we are going to do without the ruffle this year. A lot of girls who wear low-neck blouses are in despair. I will frankly tell them that low-neck blouses are not worn in the daytime. They must have a lace, muslin or ribbon cravat; this may not be quite so cool for summer days, but it is certainly in better style than that terrible low-neck line, with its inevitable string of beads or imitation pearls.

There are, of course, some beautiful specimens of feather boas and floral ruffles which are charming at garden parties; but for ordinary street wear nothing seems to me in better taste than what is commonly known as the American cravat and stock. This is seen on all of the useful French frocks, except those for afternoon receptions and really gala occasions.

Entire frocks of lace are seen, and the accordion-plaited or killed chiffon gown, simply finished with a cape collar of lace and a wide sash of pompadour ribbon, is a charming revival. I must say that I love the sun-ray plaited skirt in these soft materials; I think it looks so much less stiff than the finely-killed skirt.

Very pretty are the turban-shaped toques and French sailor hats in red, with linen and cotton frocks. But the chic of these hats lies in the putting-on; the utmost simplicity is their only

Nearly all the ribbon bows are knife-killed, and firmly and stiffly made—surely an excellent notion for the business-like hat "warranted to stand hard wear!"

Parisian dressmakers have sent us plisse skirts of grass lawn with blouse-bodices and large collars, adding at neck and waist a touch of pale green or vieux-rose. These are sure to have a fair amount of popularity owing to the rage for biscuit and fawn shades.

Again, grass lawn can look very charming for a simple frock with entreeux of coarse lace round the hem of the skirt, and also to form the collar. This fabric mixes admirably with that new make of macramé lace. There is after all a good deal to be said in favor of the utility of this rather monotonous shade, and therefore it is worthy of consideration by those who have to be economical.

A smart little afternoon frock in grass lawn was worn over a pale green taffeta petticoat, made with several rows of gaugings round the waist, finished with five abnormally large tucks at the hem. A cape-collar of coarse lace and grass lawn was fastened down under a pale green swathed taffeta band worn over a blouse consisting entirely of gauged grass lawn. This was surmounted by a pale green straw sailor hat, simply trimmed with a wreath of black velvet balls. A coarse hopsack linen in this same pale biscuit shade was extremely effective trimmed with red oriental embroidery. The skirt of this was killed with a yoke piece of embroidery over the hips, the embroidery forming a panel down the front. The pelerine-shaped collar was of coarse lace with insertions of this same embroidery, and arranged in a plait back and front. The blouse of linen was finished with a scarlet leather band worn with an all-scarlet taffeta hat and parasol en suite. This costume was essentially French; the skirt was just off the ground at the back, though it did not permit you to get a glimpse of the red shoes in front. I do not say every woman could have worn that costume.

BY THE PESSIMIST.

Few people seem to realize that vices are but latch keys to Limbo.

People with really good intentions often do the most downright harm in this world.

If men were compelled to sit in the hot sun and fish all day they would consider it a hardship.

While making up your schedule for charitable work do not forget the Tramp Aid Association. Lo! the poor hobo, with weary feet is treading the ties and he hath not where to lay his block.

People should be taught to train up their girls to be domestics. In a few years cooks and housemaids will be ruling the land. We would not be surprised to see a cook occupying the president's chair at no far distant date and her cabinet will doubtless be composed of housemaids and scullery maids.

Rigid Etiquette for Women.

In northern India it is still considered not genteel for a woman, even when veiled from head to foot, to walk on a railway platform to get into the cars. She has to be carried in a closed palanquin right up to the window of her compartment.

False Faces.

Thanksgiving time is the busiest season for the manufacturers of and dealers in masks and false faces. The fashionable costume parades and the old custom of masking and dressing for amusement on Thanksgiving day keep up from year to year in many parts of the country, so that the quantity of false faces sold at this season is enormous. The manufacturers make it a point to get up new styles, and this year brownies, "yaller kids," parrot visages and many other novelties will be on sale. Masks of prominent men and the foremost political leaders are made by some manufacturers, and large sized false hands, noses, ears, etc., are also new and amusing—Selected.

New Value for Solar Parallax.

In view of the probable publication in the near future of the results obtained from the observations of Eros, Herr B. Weisner, of the University of Odessa, has collected about 130 of the more trustworthy values of the solar parallax as obtained by different observers, using various methods, since 1825, and has discussed them in a paper communicated to the Astronomische Nachrichten. From the discussion he has obtained 8.8004" with a probable error of .00243" as his final value for this constant.

Senator Will Not Resign.

THIS COSTS YOU NOTHING

Peoples Drug Co. Will Return Your Money if Mi-o-na Does Not Cure Dyspepsia and Increase Flesh.

There are hundreds of people in Janesville who were not the last bit surprised when they read in the Gazette that Peoples Drug Co. are selling Mi-o-na under a guarantee to refund the money, in case it did not cure indigestion and increase weight. This remarkable preparation is a true flesh-forming food, that builds up good, healthy solid tissues and makes thinness and scrawliness a thing of the past.

It tones up the digestive organs, and will cure the worst case of indigestion, headache, dizziness, or the depressed, weak condition that afflicts nearly everyone who suffers with stomachic trouble. Mi-o-na does not simply relieve; it does lastingly good.

Peoples Drug Co. can tell you many well known people whom Mi-o-na has restored to health, and given an increase in flesh, after trying other methods of treatment with no benefit.

In 98 out of every 100 cases where Mi-o-na is used, the result is a restoration of perfect harmony between height and weight and an absolute and permanent cure of all stomachic troubles.

Peoples Drug Co. believe in Mi-o-na and stand ready to refund the price to any customer who can say it has not helped.

The best kind of advertising is the praise of a pleased customer, and there are today hundreds in Janesville who are advertising Mi-o-na because it cured them. A few months ago they were thin and dyspeptic, and could eat nothing without fear of stomachic trouble. Since using Mi-o-na they have made noticeable gain in flesh, can eat what they want, and when they want, without fear of suffering.

Remember that you risk nothing in buying Mi-o-na. If it gives you the desired effect the cost is trifling. If it fails Peoples Drug Co. will pay for the remedy.

WISCONSIN WEATHER FORECAST

Threatening tonight with probable thunder showers; warmer Tuesday.

LAFOLLETTE'S FRIENDS.

Evidently the Entering Wedge, a paper published at Durand, Wisconsin, as greatly feared by the members of the coterie that surround the chief executive of the state. They evidently are afraid that the truth of the relation between the Governor and the members of congress and senators or in fact, many members of the State senate and assembly will be too widely spread and so Secretary of State Houser goes out of his way to correct any impression of discontent that may have arisen. Mr. Houser is an old newspaper man. He realizes the influence that a paper has on a community and makes haste to try and correct any opinion that may have been spread broadcast. The article published with which Mr. Houser found fault with came originally from the Oshkosh Northwestern. This paper it will be remembered, was one of the Governor's chief supporters last year, and this year, while it may not have swerved completely around, is slowly but surely coming to its senses as to just how dangerous a proposition the Governor's present attitude really is.

The article referred to follows: "No intelligent man with the good of his party at heart, can consider the relations existing between our governor and the prominent republicans of the state without a feeling of regret. When the governor of the state so conducts himself that neither of the state officers and only a small handful of state senators and assembly men are friendly with him, people begin to ask, 'Where is the fault?'"

Mr. Houser then goes on to state that there is not a word of truth in the article. He admits that the men mentioned do not go out of their way to embrace the governor nor that he makes any extra effort to salute them in bible fashion but that he does not know of any one with whom he is not on good terms. He admits that they are of different political views. One feature of his article is the statement that Governor La Follette was one of the first to greet Senator Spooner on his re-election last winter. This is interesting. As chief executive of the state of Wisconsin Governor La Follette attended the election of Senator Spooner. He sat in the second row from the speaker's desk. During the whole of Senator Spooner's speech he sat as immobile as a marble statue. Never an expression of approbation or enthusiasm showed on his countenance. When the senator stepped down from the rostrum to receive the congratulations of his friends and the members of the legislature Governor La Follette walked up by the senator just elected and with his head turned slightly away bowed and touched hands with Senator Spooner. The senator had his hand extended to all but to a person standing a foot away not one word of congratulation could be heard on the part of the governor to the senator just honored.

To others Senator Spooner had a word of greeting to and from and a smile on his face. As to members of the legislature it may be said that many of them were not on such intimate terms with the governor that they could call at his office and except for his own personal leaders few did call. He has passed state senators in the halls of the capitol building with barely a nod and some with even less than that. To his friends, his supporters, he has always been the genial magnetic man he is but to men who have opposed his wishes he is cold and distant. Governor La Follette may be a great man in the opinion of some of his followers but to the conservative line members of the Good Old Party, his actions are fast disrupting them in Wisconsin.

FISCAL YEAR.

The fact that the exports of the United States in the fiscal year just ended are greater than those in any preceding year except 1900 lends special interest to a statement presented by the Department of Commerce and Labor through its Bureau of Statistics which shows the relative growth of the export trade of principal countries of the world for a term of years and compares that of the United States with other countries. The table in question shows the principal countries of the world in 1870, 1880, 1890, and the latest available year. In the case of the United States the latest available year is the fiscal year ending June 30; in most other cases the latest available year is the year ending December 31, 1902; in a very few cases the latest available year is 1901; in a few exceptional cases the figures presented are those of not only domestic products, but include foreign and colonial products as exported, but this is only the case in a few of the smaller countries, which do not show their domestic exports separately from the total exports and in these cases the share which foreign products re-exported forms of the total is so small as to not materially affect the statement.

A study of this table of exports from the principal exporting countries of the world shows some facts of special interest to the people of the United States. One of these important facts is that the United States which occupied fourth place in the list of exporting countries in 1870 now shows a larger total in the final column which represents the latest available year than does any other country of the world. The United Kingdom, France, and Germany showed in 1870 a larger total of domestic exports than did the United States, the figures being, for that year: United Kingdom, 971 millions; Germany, 552 millions; France, 541 millions; and from the United States, 377 million dollars. By 1890 the domestic exports of the United States exceeded those of France or Germany but were still below those of the United Kingdom the figures for that year being: United Kingdom, 1185; France, 629 millions; and the United States, 824 millions. In 1890 the United States occupied a similar relation in 1902 the latest available year for which figures of the United Kingdom, Germany, and France are available, the figures of domestic exports stood: United Kingdom, 1,379 millions; Germany, 1,113 millions; France, 616 millions; while the United States for the 12 months ending June 30, 1903, are 1,392 millions, stated in round terms, the precise figures as announced by the Bureau of Statistics being $1,392,087,672.

PRESS COMMENT

Marquette Eagle: With ordinary good luck this country will not go to the demagogue bow-wow quite as quickly as Governor La Follette in his lectures seems to expect.

Milwaukee News: Singularly enough, Editor Pfister, in looking over his exchanges hasn't seen a thing suggesting that the factions compromise on the Hon. Isaac Stephenson for governor.

Appleton Post: Ex-Senator Daggett of this county should take note of the fact that a Chicago jury has returned a verdict of "death as the result of tight lacing," which puts him in the position of saying "I told you so."

Menasha Breeze: These days, as we read of heat and storm and sunstroke and damage and death, how glad we are that we live on Winnebago, where there is neither the one or the other, but cool winds and pleasant skies and gentle rains and happiness.

Marquette Star: There will be a big gathering of singers when the first meets in Marquette next July. The Marquette German Singing society is composed of well-known Marquette residents and they will prepare a splendid program of entertainment. Over 10,000 people are expected.

Green Bay Advocate: If nations can settle their differences with honor to one another without a resort to violence, it ought to be possible for employers and employees to reach satisfactory agreements by peaceful means, by arbitration when neither party to the dispute can be moved by the arguments of the other.

Merrill Advocate: The Oshkosh Northwestern thinks that the democrats who expect victory next year owing to the factional controversy in the republican party are crowing too early. If they do not crow now they will not have any chance to crow at all. There will be no split in the republican party next year.

Fond du Lac Reporter: Judging from the reports from numerous Wisconsin cities in which street fairs have been held this summer, this particular form of entertainment has not proved very satisfactory to any one but the traveling showmen who have taken considerable money away with them and left nothing behind. Fond du Lac will put all of its energy into making the county fair a success this fall and leave the traveling fakirs to other cities. Home enterprise is the best after all, and loyal support given to the county fair will yield large returns and leave no regrets when it is over.

ROCKFORD MATCH COMES TUESDAY

SINNISSIPPI TO MEET ILLINOIS-ANS TOMORROW.

CONTEST THROUGH STREETS

H. S. McGiffin and J. P. Baker in a Novel Match—News from the Links—Team Changes.

Tomorrow the Sinissippi golfers play their return with the Rockford Country club. The latter organization will entertain about half a hundred team members and others who will go purely for pleasure's sake. About twenty-five will participate in the match. The Country club will serve dinner on the east porch of the clubhouse at noon, and the match will begin immediately after. Cards and a putting match will be provided for the ladies in the afternoon. In case the local delegation will remain evening festivities will be arranged. The special car leaves at 8:15 tomorrow morning.

No more unique match has been played in this city than one which has been fixed for a week from tomorrow at one-thirty in the afternoon. The contestants are J. P. Baker and H. S. McGiffin, who will tee off in front of Baker's drug store and hole out at number 9. The course to the links will be by way of West Milwaukee, North Jackson, Washington streets and Magnolia avenue. The loser will present his conqueror with a box of Haskells, value $5.25. A similar match was once played by two enthusiastic Milwaukee golfers who started near the center of the city and played through the streets to the country club.

Leo Brownell will be the only representative of the club in the state match beginning at Racine Thursday. This falling off in numbers seems inappropriate in view of the fact that the inception of the state tournament was a Janesville idea, and the first meeting was held over the Sinissippi course in 1901, the home club furnishing prizes and assuming complete financial responsibility. The plan was broached the preceding winter at Chicago, where Al Schaller and J. P. Baker were delegates to the Western Golf association.

Correspondence is being carried on with a view to securing a match with Windsor Park, Chicago. A return date with Madison is also programmed for the future.

Two changes in position were made in the Sinissippi team yesterday by C. C. MacLean's defeat of H. S. McGiffin and J. P. Baker's defeat of O. Sutherland. Brownell still heads the team, with Fred Baker, Al Schaller, and Chas. Schaller, two, three and four.

BUG ATTACKS THE CUCUMBER PLANT

It Works Underground, and Does Much Damage to the Growing Fruit.

Growers of cucumbers in some parts of the state have been troubled with a bug which attacks their plants from and operates underground, disturbing only the roots of the cucumber plants. Mr. Hohenadel of this city says that as yet the plants at their farms have not been troubled, nor have the growers in this locality. It is possible that the bugs may yet attack the plants in this neighborhood however.

It is too early to tell how large the yield will be this year, or to ascertain the net profit on the different crops.

Past the Danger Point
The yellow squash and cucumber bug has finished its depredations upon the leaves and stalks of the plants and now troubles growers no more. The evil effects of planting too early are also a thing of the past for crops planted to early have failed to mature.

200 Acres
There are about 80 growers of cucumbers about Janesville and 200 acres are planted in plots of from 1/2 to 3 acres each. The crop will mature within two weeks and will continue until the middle of October or at least until a heavy frost thoroughly kills the vines. The pickle factory will take only the smaller cucumbers from one to three inches long, using the little ones as midgets and the longer ones as dills and sweet pickles.

The pickle factory pays for all the cucumbers it uses 50 cents a bushel and is considered a rather good return for an easily harvested crop. Pickling will cost 15 cents per bushel, about $1.25 per day, and will be done largely by children. The work is like strawberry pickling—yields good returns but is rather hard on the backs of the pickers.

ARTHUR WINDISH HOME FROM EUROPE

Has Been With The Buffalo Bill Wild West Show—Return on Steam-er Oceanic.

Arthur Windish who has been traveling with the Buffalo Bill Wild West show in England, returned home last evening. His trip abroad has improved his health and Mr. Windish today is the picture of good health. The return ocean trip he made on the mammoth steamer, the Oceanic, the trip across consuming seven days. In speaking of his experience with the show in England Mr. Windish said: The show carries 200 more people than the Barnum & Bailey show did while traveling in Europe. Business was good throughout Wales, but in other portions of England it was only fair on account of poor weather.

WILD WEST IS FAST LEAVING

THE CAMPING GROUNDS VERY INTERESTING.

SCENE AT THE DEPOTS

Police Are Keeping Close Watch on All the Suspicious Characters.

Chance visitors to the Wild West show grounds early this morning found a scene that to many was more interesting than the regular performance of last Saturday. Dozens of small sized but most realistic shows were going on in all parts of the field during the early morning hours. In the big tent that had been the home of the bands of Cossacks and Arabs a picturesque scene of disorder presented itself. There were miscellaneous and mixed up piles of trunks, saddles, blankets, clothing and numberless articles used in the show itself. In one corner collected around a battered trunk were an odd group playing a jolly game of poker, staking their last pennies and not knowing where their next dinner was to come from. In this group, the sons of the desert, mingled with friendliness and good fellowship with the lanky men of the western plains and minstrels from the sunny south.

All Good Natured
For the most part every man connected with the new show took the situation good naturedly and all turned in and helped each other in getting their traps together and planning on what were the best ways out of a bad fix. Over near the menagerie tent the elephant, that alone is worth enough to pay off every employee in the show, was unconcernedly munching his breakfast and did not appear to care what was going to be done with him.

True Wild West
At the North-Western depot, as the train from Chicago pulled into the station this morning, a lady who was leaning out of the drawing room car window, was heard to say: "Why look at those horrid men with guns, and what a lot of Indians. I didn't know there were any Indians in Janesville." The depot did look like a frontier town. Several men with sombreros and their belts bristling with big revolvers were lounging along the wall while near the end of the building a group of squaws were huddled in a bunch looking as though they had lost their last friends. Just then a bunch of Turks appeared on the scene and the situation explained itself.

Under Careful Watch
Police have supervision of the grounds. Last night ten men were on the force. The order has been undisturbed, much to the surprise of Spring Brook residents. The only trouble reported was the theft of a saddle belonging to Oscar Thompson, one of the cow-punchers. The loss was felt keenly, because it is upon his saddle that he depends for occupation. Several minor disputes arose in settling the ownership of blankets, soldier coats, and saddles.

A GOOD WEEK FOR TOBACCO

WEATHER HAS BEEN RIGHT FOR ITS GROWING.

THE FIELDS LOOK VERY CLEAN

Plants Are Not as Large as Might Be Expected at This Date.

The growing tobacco has had another excellent week of growing weather to help the crop towards maturity. In a few cases topping will commence in the earliest set fields during the coming week as the buds are beginning to show. A large part of the crop is not nearly so advanced, however, some lots being but a few inches high. The shade grown Sumatra on the Milton avenue farm is not so far advanced as the two acres on the Heddles farm. The fields generally look fairly clean and free from weeds.

Aside from the usual retail trade, there is little doing in old goods. Several small lots of 1901 have been secured by J. L. and M. F. Greene and Joseph Grundy has sold a quantity of strips.

A few small lots of old goods were bought by a representative of the Franklin Cigar company, of Marquette, Mich.

A car of old goods was shipped from the Greene warehouse this week.

Small Plants East
The Lancaster, Pa., "New Era" says the past week should have been a good one for the plants standing in the fields. There was plenty of warm weather and all the rain needed into the bargain. And yet it seems to us that most of the fields are not making that rapid growth which we have a right to expect from such favorable conditions. The plants are smaller than we think they should be at the middle of July; only a field here and there, at long intervals, shows up as well as we would like to see them. But this may not be the case everywhere. We have visited only half a dozen townships, and these not the best. The fields may look better elsewhere.

MOB LYNCHES BLACK WOMAN

BULLETS PIERCE HER CORPSE

Enraged by Victim's Refusal to Confess Her Guilt, Citizens Fire into Body Dangling in the Air—Possibly Finds Her in Hayloft.

Shreveport, La., July 27.—News has reached Shreveport that Jennie Steer, a negro who administered poison in a glass of lemonade to Lizzie Dolan, 16-year-old daughter of John Dolan, from the effects of which she died, was lynched by an infuriated mob at sundown Saturday night. The lynching took place on the Beard plantation, near the spot where the woman's crime was committed. Jennie Steer was stubborn to the last, denying the crime.

It is claimed the negro fled from the Dolan household as soon as she discovered that the crime was known. She was pursued by a posse that found her crouching in a hayloft. She refused to come out and had to be dragged from the place. She was taken to the Dolan homestead and identified as the woman who had placed the poison in the lemonade.

Fire Bullets into Body.
The mob then took her to a nearby tree, placed a rope around her neck and asked her to confess. She refused to make any admissions and was strung up. While the body was dangling in the air several bullets were fired into it by the enraged citizens.

The poisoning of Miss Dolan caused intense excitement in the neighborhood of the crime. The victim was a beautiful young white girl, who was not known to have an enemy in the world. She died in terrible agony, a fact which accentuated the rage of the mob.

There is a growing suspicion that Jennie Steer was connected with the murder of Mrs. Frank Williams, whose horrible death startled the people of this section several months ago. The negro had a forbidding aspect, but was a good servant, and Mrs. Matthews kept her against the protests of her son and daughter.

Lynch Innocent Negro.

Savannah, Ga., July 27.—The Liberty county mob which followed a negro supposed to be Ed Clauss, who assaulted Miss Susie Johnson, a young white woman, near Darien Junction, through seven counties and then lynched him near Eastman, strung him to a tree and riddled him with bullets, though the negro protested his innocence, got the wrong negro after all. Members of the mob were confident they knew Clauss and on returning to their homes by way of this city made no secret of what they had done.

Information has been received from Darien Junction, where the crime was committed, that Clauss had been captured at a small station and that officers had gone to get him. Clauss was reared in the village where he is now incarcerated and there can be no doubt as to his being the man wanted for the crime, and consequently that an innocent man was put to death by the mob.

Sheriff Saves Four.

St. Louis, Mo., July 27.—Four men—Thomas Nick and W. R. Nydem and William McComb—charged with having assaulted and killed Gertrude Gibson, aged 9, at Bloomfield, were brought here for safe-keeping in the St. Louis jail, as a mob had attempted to take the four prisoners by force at Bloomfield and lynch them.

YOUTH MURDERS HIS FATHER

Says It Was Done Because His Mother Was Abused.

St. Louis, July 27.—Frank Gregory, 18 years old, shot and killed his father, John Gregory, at East St. Louis. He used a rifle for the purpose, and though it is believed the first bullet killed his victim Gregory fired five additional bullets into his father's body. The police allege that young Gregory was intoxicated and had searched Belleville, Venice and other nearby towns, where he failed at first to find his father, who was a watchman for the Wiggins Ferry Company. The murderer admits that he armed himself with the rifle and sought his father with the deliberate intention of killing him. The youth declares that his father abused his wife, and the son determined to avenge her. He found Watchman Gregory at last in a quarter of the city known as the "Island" and without delay shot him dead.

Fan Causes Death.

St. Joseph, Mo., July 27.—E. B. Fouts, an employee of Swift & Co., received fatal injuries in a peculiar manner. One of the four swiftly revolving blades of an electric fan broke from its fastenings and struck Fouts squarely on the top of the head. The end of the blade sank into his brain.

Cigarettes Ignite Powder.

West Newton, Pa., July 27.—Five boys and two men were seriously burned by the explosion of three cans of powder. Three of the boys will probably die. Sparks from cigarettes, it is thought, ignited the powder.

PANAMA FACES SERIOUS PANIC

RAID ON NEWSPAPER OFFICE

Officers of the General Staff Visit the Place and Destroy an Entire Edition—Military Leader Likely to Assume Dictatorship.

Panama, Columbia, July 27.—This city is under a reign of terror. Conservatives and Liberals are on the verge of clash of arms. Only the counsel of cooler heads has prevented an outbreak.

An effort was made to capture Gov. Mutis, but he escaped. Shortly before this a newspaper office was raided by government troops. A panic is impending.

The office of El Lapiz, the organ of the Liberal party on the isthmus, was visited by officers of the general staff of the army, who destroyed an edition of the paper. One of the directors was slightly wounded, but managed to escape.

As the office of the newspaper is situated in a very populous district, the news spread rapidly. In the Santa Ana neighborhood, where most of the Liberals reside, sentiment rose to a high pitch, and a few prominent people counseled retaliation. They took no action, however.

Escapes From Troops.

The next event came like a bombshell. A company of soldiers, apparently under the orders of Gen. Vasquez Cobos, commander of the national forces, surrounded the residence of Gov. Mutis, but the governor and his wife, who is an American, having been warned a few minutes before the arrival of the troops, succeeded in escaping.

Gen. Huertas, commander of the battalion of Columbia, when he learned of the El Lapiz incident, repaired to headquarters, where he found Gen. Huertas. According to current reports the latter ordered Gen. Huertas to remain in quarters. Exactly what has taken place is unknown, but it is said that Dr. Aristides Arjona, secretary of the government; Fernando Arango, chief of police, and Efraim Navia, a member of the departmental superior tribunal of justice, are under arrest, the last named for trying to argue with Gen. Cobos the illegality of his action.

General Cobos in Control.

An attempt also is said to have been made to arrest Senor Guerra, secretary of finance, but he refused to accompany the officer, who went to his house to arrest him, and when the officer returned with soldiers to effect his capture, Guerra had departed.

The only civil official on the street Sunday morning was Mayor Ossa. Governor Mutis spent the night at the British consulate, but it is reported that he will take refuge in the American consulate.

United States Consul Gudgeon made several attempts to secure an audience with General Cobos, who is a brother of the minister of war. It is reported that General Cobos offered the governorship to different conservatives, who refused to accept, and that he himself will assume civil command.

Refuses Consul's Message.

It is said that Consul Gudgeon attempted to send a cablegram to Arthur M. Beaupre, the United States minister at Bogota, but the agent refused to accept the message, claiming that the lines were interrupted. In spite of the fact that it is known that press messages were accepted.

There was little excitement on the street, the Colombian battalion attending church in a body as usual, but the condition of affairs is very serious. Governor Mutis is virtually a prisoner. The national government in certain quarters is being held responsible for much of what has happened, because the soldiers have not been paid for some time and Governor Mutis declined to give more of the money of the department of Panama for national expenses, urging that the central government owes the department over $2,000,000, besides having obligated the department by a recent decree to pay the salaries of all civil national employees. The refusal of Governor Mutis is the origin of the discord between the civil and military authorities.

Laurel, Del., July 27.—William Martin, foreman of the Bulbeggan barrel factory, was instantly killed by the explosion of the factory boiler. His son, William, aged 22 years, was so badly injured that he died.

UNCONSCIOUS CRITICISM

(Original.)
Miss Mildred Cloverlee, well known in society, surprised "the swim," who had thought her a mere butterfly, by publishing a novel. The reviews were favorable, and everybody except Miss Cloverlee's enemies was beginning to think that she had done something remarkable for a young girl till the Analytical Review spoke of the story as "one of those novels written by a member of the smart set whose experiences in love affairs are limited to the affections of schoolboys and schoolgirls."

This criticism, of course, fell very heavily on the young author.

One evening at a social gathering Redwood Eggleston was introduced to Miss Cloverlee. The topic of conversation fell upon literature.

"What kind of stories do you prefer?" she asked.

"All kinds that are good stories."

"Do your preferences usually coincide with those of the public?"

"Sometimes. Not often. I believe, however, that when the better classes accept a story there must be something in it, and I often try to discover what that something is."

"Do you succeed?"

"Usually, so far as I can judge of what I have no proof."

There were a frankness and common sense about these statements that were very pleasing to Miss Cloverlee. She became much impressed with the idea that Mr. Eggleston's opinion of a book would be valuable. She would have been delighted to have his views with regard to her novel, but was too modest as well as too well bred to ask them. Whether Mr. Eggleston did not know that she was the author of "Adrienne" or had not read it, he did not mention it. After both had passed one of those delightful evenings that occur from meeting a congenial companion Eggleston, having asked permission to call, took his departure.

"Who is that gentleman just going out of the door?" asked Miss Cloverlee of a friend.

"Mr. Eggleston. He's on the staff of the Analytical Review. He writes the criticisms."

Miss Cloverlee's heart sank. Now for the first time she began to feel that her novel was really without value.

Mr. Eggleston called. He was still ignorant of the fact that Miss Cloverlee was the author of a book he had stabbed with the merciless point of a pen. Miss Cloverlee bore him no malice. Indeed, she regarded his unconscious criticism of great value. However, she was not disposed to give up her advantage over her critic.

"What is your opinion," was one of her first questions, "of the literary criticisms that appear in the periodicals?"

"Not," replied Mr. Eggleston.

Miss Cloverlee was taken, as a sailor would say, "flat aback." Then she remembered that one of such a profession might protect himself against disputes with authors by just such a statement.

"Why do you think so?" she asked.

"That's rather a difficult question to answer; it involves so much. But I will say, first, that different books appeal to different people, the critics as well as the laity; secondly, the critics are so loaded down with work that an author cannot be sure that his individual book will receive proper attention. These two statements are simply heads upon which I could write pages."

"You seem familiar with the subject."

"I should be; I write criticisms."

"Have you ever written a criticism on a novel called 'Adrienne' by—?" She pretended to have forgotten the name.

"I can't help you to the author. I don't remember that, since I have so many books to criticize, but I remember the story very well. The style was delightful, the ideas fresh, a depth of feeling."

Miss Cloverlee burst out laughing. Her companion looked disconcerted.

"Mr. Eggleston," she said, when she had controlled her mirth, "in your criticism of this book in the Analytical Review you referred to the author's love experiences as attachments between schoolboys and schoolgirls. I happened to read it."

"Miss Cloverlee," he said after a pause, "my explanation must be confidential."

"Certainly."

"The Analytical Review has a literary policy. I am instructed to condemn everything. Once in awhile the editor hands me a dry as dust novel in which the characters are supposed to work out certain philosophic principles that exist only in the author's beclouded brain. Having taken a brief course of philosophy in Germany, I am enabled to discuss the book with apparent wisdom. The criticism pleases those people who admire a depth they haven't themselves and sells the Review, while the condemnation of all other productions fixes its high literary standard." Mr. Eggleston paused, then added, "My excuse is that I am carrying out the orders of others."

Miss Cloverlee pondered for awhile in silence. Mr. Eggleston proceeded:

"I do not intend to remain long in a position where I am obliged to carry out a policy which I condemn. I am temporarily using my salary for support while studying my profession, the law."

Miss Cloverlee's expression changed. She looked up at Mr. Eggleston with a smile.

"Why have you been interested in the criticism?" he asked.

"Because I am the author of 'Adrienne.'"

In order to encourage Mr. Eggleston Miss Cloverlee put him in the way of marrying an heiress. The lady was a scribbler and became a successful one. She was Miss Cloverlee.

A FORTIETH
ANNIVERSARY
WAR STORY
June 9, 1863

[Copyright, 1903, by G. L. Kilmer.]

JUNE 9, 1863, the first cavalry battle of the war was fought near the Rappahannock, above Fredericksburg, Va. About 20,000 soldiers and forty guns of horse artillery took part. The fight was a surprise all around and resulted in a melee, or a series of isolated combats between regiments and brigades of horsemen, with countless feats of personal daring and fierce passages at arms.

For some days Jeb Stuart had made his cavalry headquarters on an elevation beyond the river known as Fleetwood hill. Several roads crossing the river at Beverly's and Kelly's fords lead in the direction of Fleetwood and on to Culpeper Court House. Stuart broke his bivouac on the morning of the 9th to march to Culpeper, and at the same time two columns of Federal cavalry under Pleasanton crossed at the fords to reconnoiter around Culpeper. The column crossing at Beverly's ford was led by General Buford. It fell in with the enemy soon after crossing and drove him back toward Fleetwood. This line immediately became the battle front for Stuart and Fleetwood hill his rear.

Buford's advance guard at the crossing was led by "Grimes" Davis of the Eighth New York cavalry. Davis was killed in a duel with Lieutenant Allen of the Sixth Virginia cavalry, being the slope. Colonel Harriman dashed at the line of Jerseymen without stopping to form squadrons or platoons. The Virginians were quickly routed, and also Whyte's battalion. But their sudden dash had checked the Federals. Three guns of the Sixth New York battery which had followed the Jerseymen halted at the foot of the hill. Whyte reformed two of his squadrons and swept around the hill upon the guns. Some cavalry, with the guns, galloped away, but the artillerymen fought the Virginians with gun rammers, handspikes, pistols and sabers. After the battery horses had all been cut down and thirty out of thirty-six battery men killed, wounded or captured the guns fell as trophies to the Virginians. Whyte, in turn, was surrounded and had to cut his way out, leaving the guns behind.

The section of guns taken and lost by Whyte was afterward captured in a charge of Wade Hampton's brigade, which Stuart brought up from Buford's battlefield. The right section of the same battery was charged by the Sixth Virginia cavalry, but the New Yorkers defended the guns against saber and pistol, killing the Virginia color bearer. Stuart brought up Hampton's brigade on the gallop, and when it sighted the hill the crest was covered with troopers in blue. Kilpatrick was there with the First Maine and

EXECUTION IN CHINA

CRIMINALS DECAPITATED IN THE MARKET PLACE.

Party of Americans Witnesses the Extinction of Condemned Pirates—Shocking Scene Unsuitable to Their Western Nerves.

(Special Correspondence.)

It was a beautiful spring morning, this of which I write, and the wide harbor of Chefoo was filled with the craft of many nations. There, strong and steady, blew the double cross of the English standard; here flapped the saucy tricolor of France; close at hand China's royal dragon rose and fell in undulating folds. Almost within speaking distance the Stars and Stripes floated over one of Uncle Sam's own majestic battleships, and from the flagstaff of the little Nippon-Maru that has brought us to this port Japan's full sun shone forth from its background of snowy white.

Upon our arrival in Chefoo the day before, we had called at the American consulate and had been told that upon the following morning, which was now here, there would be executed in the public market place the second batch of pirates, who, a little time before, had been taken prisoners in "flagrant delicto," and to whom but short shrift had been shown.

These pirates were part of a band that had for several years infested the lower reaches of the Yellow river, doing a great deal of damage to merchant vessels, and occasionally, in the absence of victims better worth their while, swooping down upon the towns and villages that lie along the banks of that great stream.

At last, grown bold with long impunity, they attacked a fleet of boats which, under convoy of a Chinese ship-of-the-line, was carrying supplies to Peking for the use of the great "Dragon" himself. Not only did these audacious sea rovers attack these boats, with their rich treasure of merchandise and food, but they captured them every one, incidentally wiping off the face of the waters the guardian vessel and its crew.

Naturally this was felt to be carrying matters too far, and the governor of Shantung was notified by the imperial government that if he could not prevent such unpleasant occurrences, it would be considered tantamount to a confession that his head was of no further use in its present place, and it would be promptly removed.

Of course the governor wished to avoid such a catastrophe, as irreparable as disgraceable, so a fleet of decoy merchant vessels was at once fitted out and sent up the Yellow river, and when the pirates bore down upon it, instead of the valuable and harmless goods they had a right to assume would be stored in the hold of these innocent and apparently defenseless boats, they found them to be filled with Chinese soldiers as courageous as the marauders they had come to destroy, men who, when the lust of battle was upon them, neither gave nor expected quarter.

The battle that followed, when the pirates discovered their fatal mistake, was a fearful one, but fortunately for the peace of the Yellow river, for the safety of Chinese commerce, and for the continuance of close relations between the head and shoulders of his excellency, the viceroy of Shantung province, the result was an overwhelming victory for the properly constituted authorities.

We had gone forth that morning, jauntily enough, to see a righteous judgment executed upon men who had sinned against every law, human and divine, and had expected to be very philosophical, indeed, not to say stoical, when such hardened criminals as these should suffer the extreme penalty of the laws they had outraged. Before they appeared upon the scene we thought only of their crimes, but when the wretched procession at last came into view, the doomed men, ragged, dirty, forlorn beyond description, but stumbling along bravely enough with bound arms and tethered legs, all the wrongdoings of which they had been guilty became in an instant of little moment as compared with the spectacle of that life of which this great gaping crowd had come to see them robbed.

With one exception, the condemned men seemed to be between thirty and forty years of age. This exception was a lad of not more than seventeen, and while his comrades were going to their fate with a stolid resignation, and even a sort of rude dignity, this boy had evidently worked himself up into a species of hysteria, and was alternately shouting, laughing and singing at the top of his voice. No one tried to silence him, nor seemed to pay the slightest attention to him for it was too patent that he was making a last frenzied effort to go to his death as a brave pirate should, and his dreadful mirth did not cease until the executioner stood before him. For the space of a breath there was a terrible pause, while the man and the boy looked into each other's eyes, then the signal was given, the hapless creature was jerked to his knees, his head was pulled forward, the broad sword cut heavily through the air, and another headless body dropped prone upon the ground.

This is the method usually followed at public executions of this sort. The men who are to be decapitated are placed in a line at sufficient intervals from one another so that the sweep of the executioner's arm will not be interfered with. As the time of each one comes, an assistant pushes the man to his knees, another, who stands in front, pulls the head of the unhappy wretch forward by his cue, so that the neck will be well stretched and present an easy mark to the descending sword, one stroke of which usually completes the grim tragedy.

The seventeen-year-old boy was the third to die, and as the assistant threw the bleeding head to the ground the nerve and stomachs of our little group failed utterly, and turning, we pushed our dizzy way out of the crowd, away from the dreadful spot where the sickening fumes of freshly shed blood rose up to pollute the sweet morning air.

One dreadful peculiarity was noticed in connection with the decapitated bodies, and that was that the instant a head was struck off, the body itself, that had been inclined forward to receive the blow, recoiled into an upright position, and for a brief moment continued to kneel erect, bloody and motionless before the shuddering spectators. This was later explained to us as the recoil from the extreme nervous and physical tension that had preceded the moment of death, both mind and body being sternly braced to meet and sustain the fatal blow.

"REPEALED" MISSOURI LAWS.

Judges, in 1839, Went on the County Right Theory.

A stranger while looking over some old records at the County court here discovered that the Missouri legislature of sixty-four years ago was not venerated much more than those of recent years. In the Macon County court in June, 1839, the judges coolly "repealed" a state law by the following order: "Ordered that the law passed by the legislatures of 1838 and 1835 respecting groceries and dramshops be null and void in Macon county."

In those days a grocery store and dramshop were synonymous terms, and the legislature, it seems, had been curtailing the powers of the dealers—or trying to. Having gone thus far without the militia being called out, the County court made more law in August, as appears by the minutes: "The law passed by the legislature the 13th day of February, 1839, respecting the pay of grand jurors is hereby rejected, and that there shall not any compensation be allowed for such services."

The members of this revolutionary tribunal were Elvan Allen, Phillip Dale and Lynn Dabney. The sheriff was Jefferson Morrow, who lived to be the oldest ex-sheriff in Missouri and died only a few years ago. The judges decided according to the theory of county rights, and their "laws" were said to be wonderfully popular with the people of this balliwic, but at the following session of the legislature the judges were informed that they were not elected to make laws.—Macon (Mo.) Railroad Rolling Stock.

There are fully 500,000 locomotives in this country. The Pennsylvania road builds 100 locomotives a year. There are probably 200,000 passenger, baggage, express, parlor, sleepers and mail cars. The cost of a standard freight car is $750 with wooden underwork, and $1,000 for steel underframe. The standard car is thirty-six feet long, eight by eight and a half inside measure. The capacity is from 60,000 to 100,000 pounds. The life is from ten to twelve years. The cost of a standard locomotive is $10,000 to $12,000, weight on wheels, 170,000 pounds, tank capacity 6,000 gallons and coal bin ten to twenty tons' capacity.

Tired of Diet of Seal.

A seaman on board the Discovery, of the English Antarctic expedition, says that for twelve months they had lived on seal all the time, except Sundays, when they had mutton. The problem of eating a quail a day for a month, usually considered arduous, pales into insignificance in the presence of the seal achievement. No wonder the sailor wrote: "I reckon if they turned the ship's company out in a field with plenty of grass there would not be much left."
